-A Chelsea widow of two children has been terrified by the ghost of her former husband. It is said that the lady expects to marry in a short time, and that this may have caused the return of her former husband's ghost, which a few nights ago stole into the house, and seizing the two children, took them out of bed. The lady screamed, and soon the neighbors rushed in and learned the cause of the alarm. Next night two gentle men who watched at the house saw the ghost, and recognized it as that of the widow's dead husband. White Man Named Williams, Nov Residing in the Sixth Civil Distriet. Kills One Negro and Wounds Another.

Facts as Related by a Friend of the Dead Man-The Cause of the Difficulty a Quarrel between Williams and a Brother of the Slain.

At half-past six o'clock yesterday afternoon two negroes, Henry Davis and Wash Eason were shot by a white man named Williams in the sixth civil district, seven miles northeast of this city. So far as we have been able to ascertain the facts as related by a colored man, the circumstances of the fatal shooting are as follows: Yesterday Williams and Scott Davis, brother of Henry Davis, came to Memphis and had a quarrel about stock jumping into the former's field. Scott Davis, Davis before Justice Davis swore out a warrant before Justice Winters. As Williams left town before he could be arrested, the warrant was intrusted first-class talent for Estival.

—Abrams, the Beale-street cobbler who was arrested for abusing his partner's wife, Mrs. Bernstein, had a hearing on a writ of habeas corpus yesterday. Judge Ray released the defendant. Davis, proceeded down the road, being ac

Davis, proceeded down the road, being accompanied by two other negroes, Ben Humphreys and Wash Eason. Henry Dav's had a musket, but neither of the other negroes were armed. When they approached the house of Frank and Thomas Pugh, brothers-in-law of Williams, the latter being armed with a double-barrelled shotgun, halted Davis, and asked, "Where are you going?" When Davis, according to our informant's statement, replied, "I am going about my business." Williams fired and the negro fell mortally wounded, one buckshot entering his neck, one his jaw, and a third negro fell mortally wounded, one buckshot entering his neck, one his jaw, and a third his forehead. Wash Eason, seeing Davis fall and the blood cozing from the wounds, told Williams that he should rot have shot the negro. This offended Williams, who then emptied the other load of buckshot into Easen's right shoulder. Realizing what he had done, Williams and another white m seized the musket of Davis, mounted their horses and fled. Davis was carried home, but died in a few minhome, but died in a few min-utes. Dr. Hunt probed Humphreys's wounds, which are serious, though they may not prove fatal. It is supposed that Williams fled to Fisherville, where he makes his home, but had been assisting his brothers-in-law on their farm, in the sixth district. It is said that Henry Davis, having heard of the difficulty between his brother Scott and Williams, armed himself and down the road to meet the It behooves the sheriff to see that Williams is arrested and brought to trial. Whether right or wrong, Williams must be arrested. There is no little excitement among the negroes in the neighborhood where the

in a Camden (New Jersey) court to-day on the hearing of George F. Benkirt, formerly a prominent Philadelphia merchant, charged straining the tax-collectors of Memphis from collecting any scrip or anything else than lawful money of the United States in payment of the Nicolson pavement judgments. The bill especially prevents City-Attorney Walker and Mayor Flippin from the exercise of free speech in advising or instructing the tax-collector to receive city scrip.
